

Residential Settings and Services for Long-Term Care Medicaid Clients [Licensed and Certified]

	Housing	Services	Reimbursement
Institutional	Nursing Homes - Nursing Care Facilities	Nursing homes provide long-term care services including skilled nursing services to individuals with significant physical and mental impairments. Many nursing homes also offer short-term and extended stay rehabilitative services. Some nursing homes have special units for people with Alzheimer's Disease or other types of dementia.	Medicaid pays a daily rate for Medicaid eligible residents.
	Intermediate Care Facility for People with Mental Retardation (ICF/MR)	ICF/MR facilities are designed for the care of people with developmental disabilities. They provide supervision, nursing services, occupational and physical therapy, activity programs, educational and recreational services, and psychological services. They also provide assistance with activities of daily living, including eating assistance, housekeeping, personal care services and administration of medications.	Medicaid pays a daily rate for Medicaid eligible residents.
Home and Community Based Services	Assisted Living Residences	Assisted living residences are of three types: private pay, alternative care facilities (Medicaid certified) and residential treatment for persons with chronic mental illness. They provide a range of services including: medication management, personal care services, protective oversight and supervision available on a 24-hour basis.	Resident pays room and board; Medicaid pays for services for Medicaid eligible residents.
	Community residential homes and group homes for persons with developmental disabilities	Group homes that provide services and support for at least four and no more than eight people with developmental disabilities. These homes must provide a homelike environment, with use of common areas by all residents. Supportive services include meals, laundry, personal care, assistance with medications and protective oversight. Activities and transportation are also provided. Residents' medical needs must be overseen by a primary care physician, and the home must furnish required medical services and keep residents' medical records.	Medicaid pays a daily rate for services for Medicaid eligible residents.
	Adult Foster Care	Adult foster care is a non-medical facility for frail elderly persons and adults with physical or mental disabilities. Services include: meals, transportation assistance, protective oversight, basic personal tasks (bathing, hair care and dressing), supervision of medications, housekeeping, laundry, home care allowance, opportunities for structured recreational activities and socialization.	State subsidized housing. Medicaid may pay for some services for Medicaid eligible residents.
	Personal residence (own home, living with relatives or friends)	The following services can be covered by Medicaid for clients residing in a personal residence: home health care, personal care, adult day health centers, homemaker/chore services, care management, home care allowance and home and community-based waiver services.	Medicaid pays for services for Medicaid eligible residents.

Source: Colorado Department of Health Care Policy and Financing: www.chcpf.state.co.us

Colorado Department of Human Services: www.cdhs.state.co.us

Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment: www.cdphe.state.co.us

UPDATED: May 2009